WATER RIGHTS
SALT LAKE

Dear Mr. Weston:

The State Engineer's Office has reviewed the civil case you quoted in your letter dated August 3, 1988. The content of the court file was directed to the users on the system and did not direct the State Engineer, or any other public official, to monitor the flow rates at the diversion. For this reason the State Engineer has not regulated flows, or issued subsequent orders, on the Big Spring system.

It is the understanding of the State Engineer's Office that you are currently litigating the concerns you have with the distribution system on Big Spring. Since the previous case was between parties using water from Big Creek, the State Engineer believes that a resolution to the issue of measurement may best be resolved through your current civil case. If the judgement involves requirements we can help with, we will be glad to assist the water users on Big Spring.

Sincerely,

Robert M. Fotheringham, P.E.
Northern Area Engineer
